To Whom It May Concern:

The purpose of this letter is to verify that all courses offered via our partnership with Teaching Channel are graduate-level courses designed to help support educators advance their professional practice, stay current in their field, and help them meet their continuing education needs.

These courses are designed for educators and professionals who have previously achieved at least a bachelor's degree to meet requirements for salary-incremental steps or re-certification credit. All Teaching Channel courses are graduate-level courses and awarded semester hours of credit, however not eligible toward a graduate degree at Loyola Marymount University. All learners taking courses for the purpose of certification, professional licensure, or salary requirements should consult with their school, district, or state leadership for approvals.

Loyola Marymount University is regionally accredited by the WASC Senior College and University Commission (WSCUC). Thank you for your interest in taking graduate-level continuing education courses.

Sincerely,
